LATEST FASHIONS LOUISVILLE JOURNAL PRENTICE. HENDERSON, & OSBORNE JOURNAL OFFICE BUILDING,

Green street, between Third and Fourth. FRIDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1866.

The Albany Evening Journal thus pleads for the right of Congress to abolsh the governments of the Southern States and make new ones to suit itself:

Congress does not propose to deny the existence of States. It has already acted unfavorably upon the plan of Thad. Stevens, which embodied a declaration of

But while the States were not out, their rebellions inhabitants were; and those inhabitants succeeded in putting the political machinery in opposition to the Union. As a consequence of this treason the State Governments, being formed by rebels, constituted of rebels, and conducted to reporte the schemes of rebels. maintained alike by our executive, military, legislative, and judicial authorities. The States had not ceased to exist, but their civil governments had. They were States without governments.

Such being the condition of affairs, the duty of Congress is evident. When it finds any State destitute of civil organiza-tion, it must proceed to secure it "a re-publican form of government." In doing this, it does not change the relations of the State to the Union. It simply trans-fers political power from the hands of one sted, would have more force to vacate the State Governments than treason; so that his argument is susceptible of amendment, though, when perfected, it will not pass, for there was no alienage in the case. The people were in the Union; and, being so, were no doubt technically guilty of treason, but whether or not their eason vacated the State Governments is another question. In considering the extraordinary power now claimed for have repeatedly said, to grant the affirmative of this question, and to proceed on the assumption that the rebellion actually acated the State Governments. We acordingly admit this assumption.

The State Governments, then, were

"Such being the condition of affairs," says our contemporary, "the duty of Congress is evident." So we think. The evident duty of Congress is to do othing. As we say in the West, after our Saxon forefathers, it isn't Congress's say. If the State Governments were ever vafilled. They are legitimately and constistutionally filled. They have been filled by the people, who alone have the right to Presidency, his whole purpose being to that this portion of the work on this line matter. It is undoubtedly the duty of Congress to guaranty to every State a republican form of government; but it is not the duty of Congress, under the pretence of executing this guaranty, to effect without the concurrence of the States themselves." If Congress interposes by virtue of this authority, it is "of course bound to pursue the authority. But the authority extends no further than to a guaranty of a republican form of government, which supposes a pre-existing government of the form which is to be guar-

We plead now not for the Administration, as we have no doubt it will find the

know as well as we can know by the logic of history and the light of reason of any future event that this project, if it is carried out to its inevitably bitter end, will produce trouble. It will certainly convulse the whole country from its centre to its circumference, and be likely to break up our Federal Government altogether.
Nothing is more certain than that the present power of the radicals in Congress, based as it is on the will of the minority of the people, will sooner or later give place to that of a majority, who will redress their wrongs by undoing the presplace to that of a majority, who will redress their wrongs by undoing the present injurious legislation. If that were all that will be likely to occur, we should not be so anxious about the matter. But it will not be all. Passions, enmities, and revenges will be the natural consequences, and they are the superinducing causes always of internecine war. The present poisoned chalice will be returned drugged with more acrid poisons. Respect for the Constitution will be destroyed. The temple of liberty will be pulled down over our heads, and anarchy will be left to carry away the fragments. This is what we greatly fear. this, it does not change the relations of the State to the Union. It simply transfers political power from the hands of one class of citizens into those of another class, and provides for carrying on the business of the State in conformity with the requirements of the Constitution.

This is a poor excuse; yet it is perhaps as good as the case admits of—no, not quike, for it involves, we perceive, some inconsistencies which do not strictly belong to the argument.

For example, our Albany contemporary says, that, although the States were not out of the Union, their people were; and from this remarkable assumption he derives the extinction of the State Governments. He says the people were out of the Union, and at the same time accuses them of treason; but, if they were out of the Union, they were alienes, and allens cannot be guilty of treason, which is a breach of allegiance. Our contemporary's argument, as he puts it, is too short at one end. However, allenge, if it existed, would have more force to vacate itself, nor yet for any partied, which we have for the content of the State were read for the Man Throot Popular of the Union, their people were; and from this requirements of the Constitution.

Jno. W. Price, a lawyer of Jacksonville, Fla., writes under date of Nov. 15th, to Gen. Foster, complaining of certain unlawful acts on the part of the citizens of Brevard county. He alleges that the people of the county elected a Sheriff, who, after having been duly qualified, was two months afterward deposed by the Judge of Probate, on the latter's own responsibility, and without authority of law, the said Judge having taken by stealth the tax-books of the Sheriff. The same, writer charges that this Judge of Probate is issuing pre-emption titles for land under an act of the State Legislature of 1864; and that one James F. P. A HAUNTED HOUSE—STARTLING REVELATIONS—THE SCENE OF A MURDER EXACTED EVERY NIGHT!—On the south side of St. Charles street, between Eleventh and Twelfth, stands an old brick building of peculiar construction. There are courts and corridors, winding stairs, ob-scure attics, halls, quaint little chambers, and nooks and corners innumerable. The building has the appearance of a castle, with a high wall around it, a sliding door in front, with a loop-hole or lookout, secured by iron bars. The building forms a square, with the west side open and a yard or court in the center. It is a two-story house, and there are but one or two other buildings on the block. Fronting the house on the north is a long strip of ground, boarded up and used as lumberyards. At night the place has a gloomy appearance; few persons will venture to named Mary Henry, who flourish peerage, proves that the foe that has so often attempted the extermination of our race oy a beauting and well known courtesain named Mary Henry, who flourished there for a dozen years or more, and was regarded as one of the most fashionable and fascinating of her class. About the close of the rebellion the house became unoccupied. Mrs. Henry had retired to live in splendor in the East on the fruits of her contraband profession.

For some time the building has been occupied by colored families, who take in washing, work out, keep boarders, and make a living as best they can. Among the occupants of the house was an old lady named Mrs. Phillips, who lived in a room on the first floor of the south wing. This Mrs. Phillips was at first greatly annoyed by the strange noises heard by her every night, and although a constant repetition of the disturbance had the effect of quieting her fears, yet she was never per-Irish nature that suggests to our enemy an outrage se unheard of, as that a whole nation must be sacrificed at the shrine of tyranny for an aspiration after freedom, had the reputation of being haunted be-fore she moved into it. Yet having a clear fore she moved into it. Yet having a clear conscience, she went to confession, received absolution for the past, present and the future, and boldly ventured in amongst the ghosts. While sitting in her room at night she would hear footsteps softly approaching, the door would be thrown open, but no object could be seen, whether spirit or mortal. All the doors of the house have bolts on the inside, and Mrs. Phillips would bolt her door securely, yet it would fly open at the approach of footsteps, and sometimes close of its own accord. She could hear footsteps ascending the stairs at all hours of the night; catch the rustle of silk dresses, but never heard the sound of a human voice. The door opening on the stairs would also unclose without any visible human agency, and the old lady visible human agency, and the old lady was often deceived by the sound of persons coming down stairs, but could never see them.

These little annoyances were borne with Christian fortitude, and soon became so common that they were not regarded. But there was one scene enacted every night there was one scene enacted every night, which always caused the old lady's blood to run cold. This was the acoustic representation of a murder. About 12 o'clock at night a scuffle would be heard—a dull blow would sound in the corridor—a body would fall heavily upon the floor—there would be a heavy trampling of feet, and in a few minutes she would hear a noise like the dragging of a dead body through the hall, out at the front door, across the street, and among the rubbish of the vacant lot just opposite. Mrs. Phillips religiously believes that a horrid murder had been committed in the house, and, if we been committed in the house, and, if we remember rightly, the bloody corse of a stranger was found in the stone-yard which formerly occupied the vacant lot. The nightly repetition of this murder annoyed the old lady, and she determined to move

but, beyond this, there are other reasons and deep-moving causes that have tended lately to almost an entire reorganization of the forces of this journal.

The principal of these causes was the combination of a certain class or "ring" of editors, reporters, and others, with the secret purpose of fleecing Mr. Bennett, Sr., in a most ungrateful and even criminal manner. This clique, led by a former correspondent, who had been placed in a responsible position in the editorial room, was composed exclusively of Western journalists, who, in order to furnish the Western press with news, stole the matejournalists, who, in order to furnish the Western press with news, stole the material of the Herald's special dispatches from all parts of the world, and used the telegraph for the speedy transmission of the stolen property to the newspapers of the West. Although they received a large sum for this journalistic plundering, the proprietors of the papers receiving the benefit of their dishonesty could well afford it, considering that Mr. Bennett pays on an average three hundred dollars, in expenses and salaries of correspondents, have perfect control of every department of the establishment, thus aiming to make it a stupendous fraud on Mr. Bennett, and, it a stupendous fraud on Mr. Bennett, and, moreover, to be supported and perpetuated by his genius and liberality.

With this design they began a systematic and continuous decrial of the merits of Eastern journalists, and one by one, through the employment of insidious means and artful mendacity, they succeeded in ousting a good number of them, filling their places with "trustworthy" men from the West.

But a number of shrewd employee of the ceeded finally in obtaining indubitable proofs of the nature and extent of the erromous swindle being perpetrated on Mr. Bennett; and, accordingly, after having made all their preparations, and having procured written evidence on every charge, presented the papers setting forth the whole fraud to Mr. Bennett himself. The result was the discharge of the entire "ring" and the repression of the boasted "Western enterprise" in the Herald editorial rooms.

He further deposes that the sums so lost by him were on policies sold to him by defendants, known as "lottery policy slips," purporting to be decided by the drawings of the "Kentucky State Lottery" and "Shelby College Lottery, of Kentucky," which he alleges are "owned, managed, controlled, manipulated and conducted by the first ten defendants" above named. The "deponent is informed, and believes and expects to be able to prove, that said drawings of said Kentucky lotteries, instead of having been lawfully and fairly drawn for Deponent then describes in his affidavit some of the "tricks and devices" resorted to by defendants to effect these false and fraudulent drawings, such as the employment of one Lewis Davis to superintend the drawing in Kentucky, and to telegraph in cypher the result to defendants, who compared them with the numbers on the policy slips sold by them, and, if the drawings "were found to inflict losses on said

Another "trick and device," he deposes, was to exclude from the observation of the drawing all persons not in the interest of the said owners and managers, and to "stock" the room where said drawings were made with myrmidons and agents of their own; that one of the parties thus employed to prevent the intrusion of the public upon the false drawings was John K. Briggs, who on one occasion, acting under orders of the owners and managers of the drawing, suspended a drawing for the avowed reason that said drawing should not be witnessed by any person who was not connected with, or in the interest of, said owners and managers.

The London Dallies.—The London correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, who has been making researches among the daily newspapers of that city, gives some interesting statistics on the subject. Of the Times he says: "I am informed that its circulation, morning and evening, is about 60,000, and that its net profits last year were not far from £50,000." The most popular paper in England, owing to its cheapness and its powerful advocacy of the Reform question, is the London Telegraph. It is a morning paper only, and its circulation ranges from 155,600 to 160,000 daily, and its profits last year were within a fraction of $260,000. The Standard, a cheap paper, somewhat similar to ard, a cheap paper, somewhat similar to the last mentioned, circulates in its morn-ing and evening editions about 85,000 cop-ies, yielding a profit last year of not far from $125,000. The Herald, the old Tory organ, has a circulation of 1,000, which pays, however, about $10,000 profits. The Morning Advertiser, the victualer's paper, has a circulation of 25,000, and cleared last year $60,000. The Morning Post, the aristocratic organ, circulates even less than the Herald, and pays about the same. The Daily News, so favorably known here for its opposition to the Rebellion, gets credit in well informed circles for a circulation of 5,000. The Star, John Bright's organ, in which he is an owner, and sometimes a which he is an owner, and somet edition, and circulates about 30,000 copies daily, and the stockholders of the Star pro-perty divided among their own selves, on the lirst of last January, a little more than

The English Parliament will probably assemble on the 5th of February.

A LATE SENSATION.—The latest raptures of fashionable circles in New York are over a good-looking and proposessing young man, who styles inmedit George Gordon De Luna Byron. He was a captain during the war on Fremoont's staff, and claims to be a son of Lord Byron and a noble Spanish lady of the De Luna family, by a secret marriage. The young hero is said to possess every qualification that can assist in successful imposition upon a far less credulous public than that of Fifth avenue. Hulse, and Oscar Clark, all of whom the sheriff is directed to hold to bail in the sum of $3,000 each.

The order of arrest was granted on the affidavit of Nelson B. Odell, a cooper in West Nineteenth street, near Tenth avenue, who deposes that during the two years last past he has lost the sum of $35,000 at different lottery and policy shops kept and maintained by the above defendants, of which sum $10,000 was lost at the shop kept by John McGee, at 133 Seventh average. lears of immediate detection by a com-munity always willing to be humbug-ged. The illustrated books of this year are olerably numerous, but the number is very small of which it can be said that they are absolutely good. In most cases it seems that publisher, artist, and engraver must have been in too great a nurry. In nearly all we find coarsely executed, feeble, or blurrrd designs side by side with the most creditable work. It is very seldom that there is evidence of that rigid criticism of the work by the publisher which is necessary to produce a holiday book which shall meet successfully the criticism of the public.

Clarke & Madden have a very fine assortment of all kinds of fancy goods suitable for presents, and a vast variety of bibles, prayer-books, and standard and illustrated foreign and native authors. In juvenile and toy-books, their collection is exceedingly attractive. But the pleasure of a visit to their store is to inspect the new and beautiful illustrated books especially suited for the season, such as The Vision of Sir Launfal, lately issued by Ticknor & Fields, from the University Press, in all the luxury of thick tinted paper with red margins, and of small full-page illustrations by Eytinge. The engraving of these illustrations is admirable, and they are printed with wonderful clearness and uniformity. The figures of Sir Launfal when are much better than the pictures of his youth, and are all that is to be desired. Roberts Brothers publish an elegant edition of Jean Ingelow's Poems in large octavo, upon heavy tinted paper and profusely illustrated.

Another beautiful book is the edition of Gray's Poems, published by Sevier & Francis, with Birket Foster's illustrations. The beautiful sketches of rural scenery and the finely executed head-pieces, together with a truly fastidious typography, make this one of the most tasteful books of the season.

Alice Cary's Poems, in Hurd & Houghion's edition, although published some time since, hold their place among the gift-books of the season. The book is tentious publications a brief mention of Prang's new version of old Mother Hubbard, which is finely illuminated and illustrated by a series of very characteristic lithographs, all for the special entertainment of the little ones. The collection of Folk Songs, published y Scribner & Company and to be found at Morton & Co.'s, in its new edition retains its place among the most elaborate and beautiful of our gift books. The collection is very thorough and judicious. Christmas in England is a thin quarto made up of papers from the "Sketch Book." It is issued with great care, and is remarkably well illustrated.

It appears to us that no more accepta ble Christmas gift to friend, relative, or lover could be given than a photograph of the givers lineaments when rendered by such excellent sun artists as McGill & Almond, over the telegraph office. They have a fine assortment, also, of photographic albums, frames, etc.

FLETCHER AND BENNETT. One could never tire with the thousand beautiful and rich articles of jewelry and plate exhibited by Messrs. Fletcher & Bennett, the oldest jewelry house in the city having been established here thirtysix years. Probably no where else can be seen so large and rich an array of silverware as at Fletcher & Bennett's. It is all of the latest and most recherche patterns. and includes every article conceivable, suitable for a present. There is always a solid satisfaction in bestowing a piece or service of plate. It is a substantial token of esteem. It is a thing to remind the recipient of a merry Christmas, and of the donor. Their assortment of watches, clocks, gems rich and rare, sets of jewelry of all kinds and prices, from the plain gold ring to the flashing diamonds, and pale, beautiful pearls, is most extensive and admirable. The most fastidious taste has range to choose. The store is a wilderness of richness and beauty, and another beauty is that the firm are selling at the very lowest rates possible-indeed are of-ear at hand, and balls and parties will e all the rage, every young man who is ambitious of finding favor in fair lady's eyes, naturally desires to enter her pre nce in as presentable a shape as possi Nothing sets him off to more advan tage than a nice-fitting, handsome suit of clothes. While looking around for the place to procure them, we would advise him to call at the Masonic Temple Cloth ing Store, where he will find the finest and best, which he can purchase on as reason able terms as offered by any establish ment in the city. Their geods contain the best material turned out by the looms of Europe and America, are made up by the best practical mechanics in the United States, and are equal in quality, style price, and durability to the goods of any establishment on the continent. To Grow First Quinces.—Quinces are easy to raise, provided they receive attention. We have grown samples the first season weighing a pound each, perfectly smooth and sound.

Quince trees can stand about eight feet asunder each way, thus giving four to the square rod, or 640 to the acre. The fruit commands good prices and prohably and mmands good prices, and probably an re of ground could not be more profitacre of ground could not be more profita-ly planted with anything else.

Quince trees need ground culture. Not Quince trees need ground culture. Not by digging or ploughing about them, but by mulching with chips, spreading on a coat of stable manure each fall, and by applications of liquid manure, especially urine. There should be a few quince trees near the house, to receive the urine and other slops, which will not do an equal amount of good to any other pro-duct. This treatment will insure such duct. This treatment will insure such fruit as will bless both the eyes and the Quinces canned are a good substitute for peaches, and most persons, when ac-customed to their use, will like them ful-ly as well. There is nothing more beau-iful in the fruit line than a glass can fill-ed with large quartered. The color is beautiful, and the quarters preserve their shape. Then when they are placed on the table they are a most agreeable or natable they are a most agreeable ornament, and quite coaxing to the appe-

Perhaps the pellicles, which form the little sacks of butter in the cream, are thicker and tougher. There are two methods of obviating this trouble in a degree. One is, to set the pan of milk on the stove, or in some warm place, as soon as strained, and let it remain until quite warm—some say until a bubble or two rises, or until a skim of cream begins to form on the surface. Another mode is to add a teaspoon of salt te a quart of cream when it is skimmed. Cream thus prepared will generally come to butter in a few minutes when churned. It is thought the salt acts upon the coating of the butter globules and makes them tender, so that they break rapidly when beaten by churning CREAMIN COLD WEATHER.-For some rea-

The Cincinnati Commercial of yesterday says; One of the most bold and partly successful atmpts at stealing on a large scale that we have eard of for some time past, came to our knowling yesterday at the Golden Era brought on her strip twenty-two bales of cotton, which were nesigned to Frichard, Alter, & Co., No. 163 Pearl rect, and were disembarked yesterday morning, suring the afternoon a drayman made his appearance at the boat and presented an order for the cotton, and the strip twenty-two bales of cotton, which were disembarked yesterday morning, suring the afternoon a drayman made his appearance at the boat and presented an order for the cotton, and proceeded to load three bales on his dray, and, in pursuance to instructions, hauled them to be Hamilton and Dayton depot, where they were cighted to "John Worthington, Cleveland, him," whose name appeared also as shipper on Soon after the first lond was gone, one of the firm, n passing, missed three bales out of the lot, and injuried of the clerk of the boat as to what had bome of them. When told of the order, he suspected that all was not right, upon which he demanded o see it, and thereupon pronounced it a forgery. A the composition of the lot, and injured of the clerk of two was found freighted, as showe stated, with a man superintending the shipment. The individual was accosted, and essayed o regard and treat the matter as perfectly legitionate, but it could not be made to appear in that the individual was accosted, and essayed o regard and treat the matter as perfectly legitionate, but it could not be made to appear in that the discussion of the country of the country
